

IR TWINKLE AS THEY BLUNDER IN THE FASHION STAKES

Are you wearing that for a bet?

Id listen to shion tips. itchie, 37, en he saw fit at the rtedly d cover up. n-of-two when she appeared in a purple leotard, matching leather jacket and fishnet tights.

“Guy wasn’t happy and told her in no uncertain terms,” said an insider. “He thinks she’s too old to be wearing such skimpy things.”

But Madge is not alone in her bid to stay young, trendy and unique. Plenty of celebs try too hard and end up falling foul of the style stakes.

Just take a look at this lot.

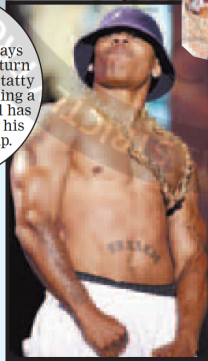

KATE JACKSON calls the fashion police to bring them down to Earth!

SIENNA MILLER, 23.
EVEN style icons can have a bad day. Sienna Miller crosses the tasteful fashion boundary in this terrible leggings, moon boots and bowler hat get-up.

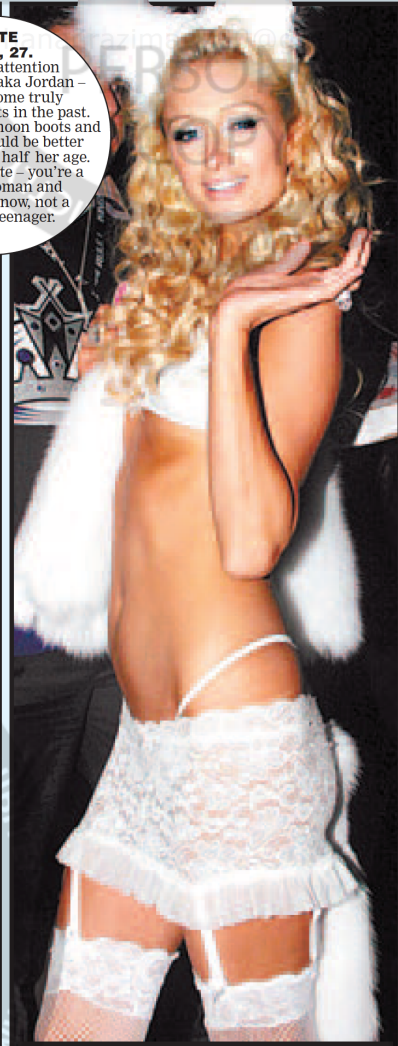

WILL YOUNG, 26
GONE are the days when Will would turn up in jeans and tatty jumpers. Since finding a stylist, the Pop Idol has been going out of his way to camp it up.

NELLY, 36
YES, he may be a gangsta rapper, but too much bling just looks tacky. Less is more in this case, Mr Nelly.

KATE PRICE, 27.
EVER the attention seeker, Kate – aka Jordan – has worn some truly desperate outfits in the past. But this garish moon boots and trackie set would be better suited on a girl half her age. Remember, Kate – you’re a married woman and mum-of-two now, not a confused teenager.

PARIS HILTON, 24
THE phrase “Money can’t buy taste” springs to mind. This American millionairess has been spotted in some very strange outfits of late and this white lacy underwear set and fluffy horns is just baffling.

ROBBIE WILLIAMS, 31
THE Stoke-on-Trent lad has always been a poser and it seems he’s exhausted nearly every fashion route. But that’s no excuse to start dressing like a pompous old man. Next, you’ll be smoking a pipe!

PETE DOHERTY, 26
KATE Moss’s on/off junkie lover reckons he’s the king of cool, but he’ll never match her effortless style. Take this straw hat for example – just take it!

WHAT'S HOT TO WATCH TODAY

■ STILL basking in the glory of her National Television Award for Greatest Actress In The Whole Wide World Ever (or something),
 Billie Piper is back on our screens tonight in a brand new production for BBC1. It's a Shakespeare play, but don't let that put you off. MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING (BBC1, 8.30pm) has been dragged kicking and screaming into the 21st century, which kind of explains why Billie is playing a TV weathergirl.

In fact, the whole thing is set in a regional television newsroom, with Sarah Parish and Damian Lewis playing rival hosts and ex-lovers Beatrice and Benedick, and Tom Ellis as the bloke who does the local sports round-up.

This is the first of four plays being radically revamped as part of the BBC's Shakespeare Retold season - the others, if you don't find the idea a complete turn-off, being Macbeth, The Taming Of The Shrew and A Midsummer Night's Dream.

■ ELSEWHERE tonight, over on ITV1, there's a Tonight
 special, DADS' ARMY: INSIDE FATHERS 4 JUSTICE (8pm), resulting from a 12-month undercover investigation into the high-profile pressure group.
 In the first of two programmes (the other one is on Friday at the same time), reporter Mark Jordan reveals the disturbing tactics some members of the group have allegedly employed to get their message across.

■ ITV1 also sees the return tonight of TRIAL AND RETRIBUTION (9pm), kicking off with the baffling case of a newly-married guy who goes AWOL while he and his missus are honeymooning in London.

■ AND psycho Jimmy Clayton lures his estranged missus, Ronnie, to a farmhouse in CORRIE (ITV1, 7.30pm, 8.30pm), then threatens her with a shotgun. He certainly knows the way to a woman's heart, bless him.

TV GUIDE

MATT BAYLIS

...ON LAST NIGHT'S TV

WHEN it began in 1986, there was something quite comforting about an episode of CASUALTY (BBC1). It seemed like every episode started the same way - with a group of boozy lads getting into a car, or a stressed-out executive snapping at his wife before he sped off to work. You just knew a motorway pile-up or a heart attack was on the cards.

Then there were cuddly characters like Kuba Trzcinski, the Polish security guard who made every scrap in the hospital waiting room worse - mostly because he spat at people every time he spoke. But the show's grown-up a lot. Some of today's characters seem much nastier.

A good example is paramedic Woody, whose dislike of his older colleague Josh has no limits. On Saturday, Josh escaped disciplinary action by a whisker, when the father of the boy he clouted the week before decided not to take his complaint any further. So Woody decided to report the matter himself - the kind of line that the characters of yesteryear would never have crossed.

Gritty

But if its characters were once a nicer bunch, Casualty always kept up a tradition of telling no-holds-barred stories - and that hasn't changed much.

In Saturday night's episode, an Asian family were being persecuted by a racist thug, who objected to his sister's relationship with their son. Fittingly enough for Bonfire Night, fireworks were involved, and the son ended up in casualty with severe burns.

It was hard to say which was more difficult to watch - the sight of a man burnt to a cinder, or the bigotry of the men who'd done it to him.

There were times when it felt a bit earnest. There were long speeches about racism and how - guess what - people from other cultures can be racist, too. But it's often said that television drama has lost its grit, realistic edge since the 1980s. Casualty proves that even primetime telly is still brave enough to talk about real issues.

LITTLE MISS CLEVER CLOGS' SEX SECRETS

Oh, Carol!

IF you're worried about getting older, just spend a refreshing afternoon with Carol Vorderman.

At 44, the stunning TV presenter is at her peak. And she says life – especially her sex life – has never been better.

"I think it's true of a lot of women in their forties," she says. "It's just like, 'b*gger it!'"

Happy

"When you're in your twenties, you're always comparing yourself to these ridiculous ideals. But once you're in your forties you learn to accept your body."

Carol is certainly happy. And there's no doubt she's a true inspiration to women everywhere. But when it comes to her bedtime routine we'd love some details.

"I could tell you some funny

EXCLUSIVE By LINDA HARRISON

stories but I'd be murdered!" she says with a laugh.

Not many maths masterminds become sex symbols but Carol seems to have managed it without breaking a sweat.

She's even been voted a top lesbian pin-up, proving that she really does have universal appeal.

Sadly for her lust-struck fans she's found her Mr Right in newspaper exec Des Kelly, who is four years younger than her.

They've known each other for five years and lived together for three.

And, according to Carol, he's more than happy with her sexy image.

But she adds: "He doesn't know about the lesbian fantasy figure thing. That could add a new dimension!"

Life has been a rollercoaster for Carol, who found fame on Countdown and Tomorrow's World. When she started out she had two children to care for and was constantly tired and overweight – her weakness was for family-size bags of Kettle Chips.

But after getting sacked from the BBC's Tomorrow's World for appearing in a soap powder ad – something she still blasts as "ridiculous" – she had more time on her hands. She joined a gym and she went from a size 16 to a size 10.

She was turned on to detox after bumping into a pal who looked amazing after trying it.

"I thought if she can do it, so can I," says Carol. Now she's as famed for her eating regime as for her TV appearances. "My friends are always laughing at me," she says. "They say, 'Ooh, you with your detox – you come across as this boring woman who eats nothing but chopped-up vegetables'."

"Before I started the detox I was always calorie-counting in my head. I'd think, 'I'm only going to have 1,000 calories today'. But by 3pm I'd be starving and would stuff my face with anything and everything."

Surgery

Today, she's happy with her body. And who can blame her when she looks so good?

She is regularly voted one of TV's sexiest women – without the aid of any plastic surgery. Although she won't rule out going under the knife in the future.

"I probably would do it, actually," she says. "But I don't like the idea of a knife."

But to look this good, she must surely deprive herself of treats. Does she still go out and get drunk?

"God, all the time!" she says. "Once a week at least. Always on champagne so I don't get hangovers. Now I'm in my forties it takes me three days to get over a hangover."

"But I do love long lunches that go on until midnight and I've had quite a few drunken escapades. I like a bit of mischief."

This naughtiness probably helps keep her sane, given her hectic workload. No sooner has she finished our interview than she's flying off to New York to launch her sudoku book in America.

Is there no end to Ms Vorderman's energy? Apparently not!

● The full interview appears in the latest issue of Top Sante magazine, out now. Carol Vorderman's How To Do Sudoku (Ebury Press, £5.99) and Detox For Life (Virgin Books, £10.99) are out now.

'My man doesn't know about the lesbian fantasy thing'

Just Jane

JANE O'GORMAN SOLVES YOUR PROBLEMS TODAY
... AND EVERY DAY

He's a pig at home

MY boyfriend and I have just moved in together and I should be the happiest girl alive, but he's driving me mad.

We're arguing all the time over the smallest things.

The main problem is that I can't stand mess – and he's the messiest person I've ever met. I'm getting really stressed out about it.

Every time I come home from work, I have to tidy up and never have any time to relax. He leaves his clothes everywhere and never helps me clean up the house.

This atmosphere of anger and resentment is really beginning to affect our sex life.

Is it me? Am I being unfair or do I expect too much?

There must be a solution that doesn't involve us splitting up because, despite everything, I do still love him.

JANE SAYS: Your boyfriend sounds immature and he needs to start growing up.

If he thinks he can act like a slob and you're going to be his new mummy, he must be put straight.

Welcome him into the adult world, where men and women are equal and behave with respect for each other.

Point out that living like a pig is just not acceptable and that you refuse to be cast in the role of nag.

Set down house rules and make it clear what is expected of him. If he continues to treat you like a slave, then you'll have to move on or he'll crush you.

HANKY SPANKY IS SUCH A PAIN

I'm worried about my sexy slapper

MY girlfriend can only orgasm if I spank her hard first.

I'm glad that I'm able to bring her to such heights of pleasure, but this spanking lark really doesn't come naturally to me.

I have to force myself to do as she instructs and worry all the time about hurting her.

I'm 22 and have had many girlfriends. But my current girl is special – I think I could be in love for the first time.

When we first started having sex I was always very disappointed that she never orgasmed. She'd always get very excited and enjoyed lots of foreplay including oral sex. But she always told me that I was not to worry about her not climaxing.

Eventually I sat her down and we had a serious talk. I explained that most of my pleasure was knowing that I pleased her and with that she blurted out that she needed me to slap her bare bottom.

Bare

She stripped off, draped herself over my knee and told me to place my left hand on her back to keep her in position.

Then I had to begin spanking her. She looked up and told me that she'd been a very naughty girl who needed to be punished, so I slapped her harder.

She was groaning and grinding her groin into my leg. I could see her bottom becoming redder, but she ordered me to go on. Eventually she arched her back and screamed out in pleasure and it was clear she'd orgasmed at last.

Now this spanking is a regular feature of our lovemaking and she's more satisfied than ever. But is this natural? I'm a very gentle person and seriously worry if this is right.

JANE SAYS: Spanking is very common among consenting adults, so you mustn't feel that you are doing anything sinful or wrong.

For some, a playful tap on the bottom is all that is required to get the juices flowing, while for others – like your girlfriend – a firmer hand is begged for.

Your girlfriend clearly trusts you enough to be honest about her sexual needs, so take that as a compliment.

What I do think that you should do, however, is set down a few guidelines.

You need to agree just how far each of you is prepared to go and come up with a code word which means "stop".

Very often in the heat of the moment, the person receiving the spanking may shout "stop", but not really mean it.

Therefore you and your girlfriend need to be absolutely clear regarding boundaries.

The general rule regarding any form of sex game is never to put yourself in the power of someone you don't know or trust.

Up for a hot affair

I'm married with two young children. My husband is hard-working, but our sex life isn't brilliant.

A few weeks ago, I was out with friends and got chatted up by two different fellas.

The second one was really sexy and special. He told me that I was lovely and asked me to take my wedding ring off and marry him.

Now I can't stop thinking about him and wonder whether I should contact him again and take things further.

I love my husband, but am just so tempted to do something dangerous.

JANE SAYS: Please don't jeopardise your family for the sake of a cheap thrill.

I'm sorry to burst your bubble, but this guy probably uses this corny chat-up line with every girl he meets – especially if he's had a few drinks.

Instead, why don't you concentrate your energy on revitalising your marriage?

Arrange some fun nights out with your husband, organise a sexy weekend away and enjoy a few early nights. Make sex a priority again, make the sparks fly and cherish the great life you have.

Check out a Relate book called Sex in Loving Relationships by Sarah Litvinoff (EZ, Vermilion) for tips on turning a disappointing sex life into a sizzling one.

And contact Relate (0845 456 1310) if you feel seriously worried about the state of your marriage.

DEAF EARS: She wants him to be tidy round the house but he just ignores her

IT'S TATTOO SUSPICIOUS

MY girlfriend had her nipples and bellybutton pierced by her former boyfriend, who does such things as his business.

Now she wants to have her labia pierced and a new tattoo below her bikini line. Her ex has said he's willing to do it, but she'll have to shave off her pubic hair.

I don't know how I feel about this, especially as her ex is going to be doing the work himself. She's said I can go to the parlour with her – and maybe have something done myself.

Am I in danger of losing her if I don't go along with this? She's a very strong character who is also into bondage and caning, which I don't mind.

But the thought of her being in an intimate situation with her ex scares me. We've been together for two-and-a-half years.

JANE SAYS: Surely he's no longer a threat? If she's moved on, presumably he has, too, after all that time.

Why not ask her straight whether she is using the tattoo and piercing as an excuse to see him again?

By all means go along with her, but don't have anything done yourself unless you're 100% sure.

I DIDN'T MEAN TO FALL IN LOVE

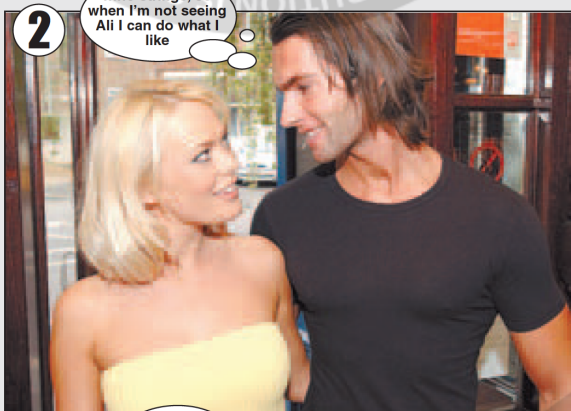

Day one

1 JAKE AND ALI ARE WALKING TO THE PUB

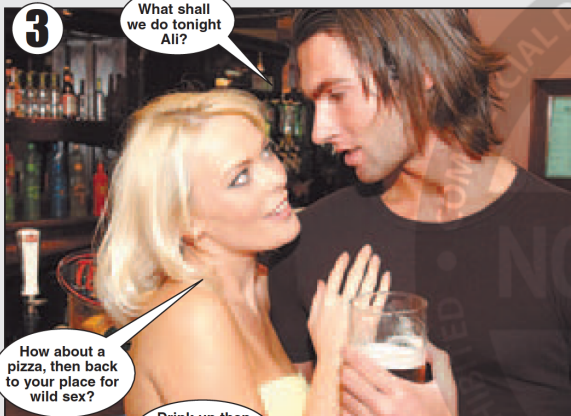

This is the perfect relationship...

2 ...no strings, so when I'm not seeing Ali I can do what I like

3 What shall we do tonight Ali?

How about a pizza, then back to your place for wild sex?

Drink up then, sounds like a perfect night to me

I'm so lucky

The DAILY STAR -gazer who knows your future

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: This will be a time to remember. Above all, you may well create something magical that will have a big impact early next year.

Aries

(Mar 21-Apr 20)

NOT only is it business as usual, but it is also impossible to predict how much you will end up with today. But there is more than just a bidding war going on. In fact your faith could disappear quicker than your money. And yet a proposition is not entirely hopeless and there are some advantages. To see why friendships and finances don't mix, call...

Taurus

(Apr 21-May 21)

THE sun is directly opposed by Mars in Taurus today and things could easily blow up in your face. This isn't a major crisis. In fact colleagues and partners would love you to prove them wrong. It sounds as if you will, though it might take a lot of persuasion to do so. To see why some restraint is required, call...

Gemini

(May 22-June 22)

THE current situation in the heavens is confused and uncertain. Even though you should be up to the challenge, it's doubtful that anyone will help out today. Apart from that, you may be expecting news from afar - and it could come at an especially good time. To see why you should take it nice and steady, call...

DAILY Star Mobiles

Our consumer guide to the latest mobile phones in the market place

CAMERA phones and music phones have dominated much of the mobile phone market this year. Now it looks like it's the turn of the videophone.

Digital media software firm Qpass has identified mobile video downloads as a significant growth area in Europe. Earlier this year mobile video downloads through its software accounted for only one per cent of total mobile content downloads, but this figure had risen to five per cent by the end of September 2005; a 55 per cent increase in six months.

Christian Lutz, general manager of Qpass Europe said: "The last six months have seen the momentum of mobile video significantly increase across the whole value chain as the market moves to embrace this exciting evolution in mobile data."

Other research groups are already predicting that mobile video will take the European wireless industry by storm during the next 12 months with video and camera enabled handsets predicted to outsell non-video handsets for the first time next year, according to research and information firm the Gartner Group.

The latest and most popular video handsets include the Sony Ericsson K608i, a slim and stylish 3G mobile phone that supports a full range of video mobile services, including video calling, video messaging, and downloading video clips.

The new Samsung D600 comes with a high quality video camera, and innovative TV-out connection feature that allows users to view their recorded videos directly on their TVs.

The D600 includes a powerful 2 megapixel camera that can take print-quality images, plus 4x digital zoom, flashlight, and selection of shooting modes. The generous 81MB of internal memory can store up to an hour of video.

The Nokia N70 is the first of the Nokia Nseries smartphones to be released in the UK. Similar to the popular and successful 6680, the N70 is a powerful imaging device with a high quality 2 megapixel camera with a full range of 3G capabilities, including video calling, video downloads and video and music streaming. A second VGA resolution camera is used for making video calls. Videos and pictures can be viewed on the N70's first class 262k colour, bright active matrix display.

Dial-a-Phone are currently offering the Nokia N70 free on 3 with 500 any time any network minutes and 100 texts per month. The monthly line rental of £30 per month has been automatically reduced to half price line rental for the first six months, on an 18-month contract, making a saving of £90.
